ymgerman/ShutterstockBored with your apps and looking for something new? We dug through Google Play, iTunes and other app stores to find the best while saving you time. Here are the apps that we think you need to check out this week. The sequel to the popular and award-winning side of the roller-adventure game is finally here, albeit only on iOS. Badland 2 more or less feels just like its predecessor, tasking players with floating through the map, avoiding obstacles and surviving until you reach the end. What is different in the second iteration, however, is that instead of just one right, you can now move both ways. He still only has one player campaign, but there are global challenges so you can complete against friends through leaders. It's a little expensive, cost you $5. iTunes Popular storytelling app has finally come to Android. Storehouse allows you to upload photos, videos and text to make a personalized story about anything. The neat part is that you can embed your story on blogs or share it with friends and family. You can also view other user stories. The features are pretty much identical to what you'll find on the iOS version, so there's no inequality. Google Play iTunes Bumble is a dating app brought to you by Whitney Wolfe, one of the co-founders of Tinder, and its focus is on getting women to initiate. It works very similar to Tinder in that it connects only people who swipe directly at each other's profiles. Another thing is that a woman should start a conversation within 24 hours before the connection disappears, and for same-sex relationships, anyone can start a conversation. Google Play iTunes Need a recommendation movie? Your friends know you better than anyone, so why not ask them? This is what Tronco is all about. You can start group messaging streams or talk to one person. The app captures your data using the TMDb API, and allows you to rate movies on a scale of 1 to 10. iTunes Google Play Selfie takers don't have to rely on the front camera anymore. Everyone knows the rear camera offers higher quality photos, and Eli is an app that lets you point the back camera and takes selfies without you having to do anything. It recognizes your face and takes some photos, but only keeps the one you choose. It offers a range of other features as well, such as adding effects while shooting rather than after. The app will cost you $3. Recommendations from iTunes editors By Malari Gokey/Digital TrendsApp stores are crowded with places these days, and because the storage space on your phone is often at a premium, you want to fill it not only the best, but also the most useful Over there. Because they come and go faster than the latest fashion trends, and dig into Google Play, iTunes App Store, or any of the other such missions; a little nudge nudge the right direction is often very welcome. Here are the apps that we think you need to check out this week. If you're big on holiday cards, here's an app that will save you a trip to the store and post office. The ink card allows users to design 5 x 7 maps by uploading a photo and pairing it with more than 500 designs in the database. Once you've completed the development, you can write a note on the back of the map. The card resolution is 300 dpi, and after you add an address to send it, the company sends it for $2 anywhere in the world. The cards, delivered to the US, UK, Europe and Canada, take two to eight business days, and sending them anywhere in the world takes up to two to three weeks. It's a quick and easy way to send a physical note rather than an electronic card. Yahoo's Google Play iTunes missed the mark with previous attempts to get into messaging services, but its updated Yahoo Messenger may finally have a hit. Aimed at amusing group messages, the sleek app is incredibly fast and sports a good user interface. The app uses an extensive Tumblr database to pull out GIFs and even connects to Flickr. Users can, like other messages and even endless them, by deleting the message from everyone's chat. You can also view chats online or at Yahoo Mail. Note that the app does need your phone number to provide a verification code. Google Play iTunes Thinking about going to the museum? With Google's new Art and Culture app, you don't have to leave your room. Google Cultural Institute is paired with more than 850 museums, archives and organizations to allow users to view images of collections and explore their history. Some museums offer 360 views, similar to Google Street View, some exhibits and images. The free app allows users to zoom in on images, and offers categories such as time or environment. It will be very easy to lose a few hours browsing through the app's vast library. Google Play iTunes Adobe is finally taking Android seriously with the launch of Adobe Premiere Clip, a free video editing app. As it is more designed for editing videos quickly on going, the app lets users weave videos in minutes using short clips or images stored on the device. Adobe also offers the option to add a soundtrack from your music library, or you can choose one of yours. The app allows you to add names, transitions and slo-mo effects to videos as well. If you're looking for a clean, simple and easy video editor, try this one. Google Play iTunes Tribe is a small video messaging app that lets you quickly send video messages to people in your contacts or groups. Of course, it's easier when which you messaging has the app installed, but if they don't, the app offers an exchange feature that allows you to send a video message to someone via another app or via text. While the app is definitely colorful, it's also fast and quite similar to Snapchat. It even deletes every message from the app database after it Opened. Google Play iTunes is all this week, but check back for larger apps every week. The editors' recommendations are the best free app launches to do exactly what they say on the tin: they are free and help you with the launch. Nothing better, isn't it? With more people than ever working in locking - and the fact that some of the most popular and previously free run apps are now charging for some of their services, finding a free alternative is a great way to keep on track. According to one report, not only are we doing more running, we're also talking about running more - in March, 34 million people discussed pavement-pounding pastime on social media and 207k sharing running stats from exercise apps - like figures that are larger than January and February combined. The national lock forced us from gym to garden, outdoors, trying to find a way to stay active and necessary - running seems to have picked up the cake in terms of affordability and scalability. Thank you, run! But, know how to run, how can you actually keep it? From motivational walking plans to route trackers, navigation tools and lumberjacks, we've put together 8 of the best free apps to run to help you get into your next PB - including one that had a 92% jump in downloads for 2019. Vauva. The advert - Continue reading below 1. Couch to 5k Each of your dentist's aunts seems to be flirting with the idea of doing Couch up to 5k - runs a plan that gets novice runners and never run until runners are able to run a full 5k - and, according to the BBC, more than 858,000 downloaded the app (supported by the NHS) between March and June. This is a whopping 92% increase from a year earlier! This app has five different trainers to motivate you on your way - as well as telling you when to run and when to walk - including comedians Sarah Millican, radio host Joe Whitley and Olympian Michael Johnson. Wow. The program can be completed in guided 9 weeks or longer if you want, and this app will help you keep going when stopping seems like the easiest option. There's a break bell when you're halfway so you know to turn around and complete the loop, before and after the rating system to track your motivation, and easily follow the countdown timer so you always know how long is left of each run. iOS/ANDROID 2 Map My Run Map My Run, an armor-running app, has many features to make your experience smoother than ever. It connects to several wearable devices - including Apple Health, Apple Watch, Garmin, Fitbit, Jawbone, and more - which means you can only go with a fitness tracker, safely knowing that your stats are still being recorded. The app also offers real-time audio coaching on works, with a changeable voice for statistics like pace, distance and height. iOS/ANDROID 3 Adidas Runtastic You may have Adidas sneakers, but have you ever tried their running app? Well, if you don't, then lace, because that's so many interesting features that you have to take advantage of from distance, time, speed, height and calorie tracking for audio feedback, targeted problems and customizable targets. Oh, and they even go even further, tracking how many miles you've run in sneakers and letting you know when it's a good time to start thinking about investing in a new pair. They literally thought about everything. Welcome, Adidas. iOS/ANDROID 4 Runkeeper Runkeeper from ASICS does a lot. It can track your runs, set goals to run farther and faster, listen to audio stats telling you your pace, distance and time, follow a personalized plan that keeps you improving and join the virtual task app. Best bit? The app syncs with wearable devices so you can leave your phone at home and only go with the Apple Watch and still track your stats. iOS/ANDROID 5 Nike Run Club Nike Run Club describe this app as your perfect partner works, and TBH, we have to agree with them. Tracking and shop works in their easy to navigate super-aesthetic app, make good use of GPS to keep you on route, listen to audio coaching and set weekly, monthly, or custom distance problems, as well as bespoke coaching plans to make sure you keep breaking down your goals. While the trophies and icons you collect for new achievements can be virtual, they still mean the world to us. Beat it! iOS/ANDROID 6 Running Distance Tracking - Planned as the most accurate running app available Running Distance Tracker - tracks your pace, calories, heart rate, and of course distance. Use GPS to find new work routes, take a look at your time and speed disintegrates, as well as pulse and effort zones and listen for customizable voice feedback so you know how you're going. There are paid options in the app, but the basics - and they're really the only ones you need - are free. That's all that matters. iOS/ANDROID 7 Endomondo If you want to sync with other apps, set goals to break up, take on problems and get social with other mates running, Endomondo can be the app for you. Featuring all the classics: run tracking, audio coaching, workout resumes, personal best notifications you can also add fun extras like documenting a particularly good (or hard) work with the image, scrolling through your friends' workouts and commenting on keeping them going! There is a premium option, but everything we listed above is completely, completely free. Winner. iOS/ANDROID 8 Run Coach Run Coach does what he says on tin: It trains you through and between runs to make you a better runner. Tweak your program as your fitness improves, adjust Schedule, if you miss the run and need to recalibrate your program, access to new paces and goals as your abilities increase, synchronize with your favorite wearable and use well on the hands of trainers if you have any questions about nutrition or injury. iOS/ANDROID This content is created and maintained supported party, and is imported to this page to help users provide their email addresses.
